Highlights

After a series of positive and encouraging developments, including the JCPOA, the fast pace of development of trade is further consolidating Iran's economic role in the region and beyond. This leads to an increased demand for international arbitration by commercial players as the preferred method of resolution of cross-border disputes.

In this context, it is of paramount importance to shed light on the interconnectedness of business, trade and international arbitration. This necessitates scrutinizing best practices in ethics, transparency, efficiency and legal certainty with a view to ascertaining the leading contributory role of international arbitration to sustainable development.

This conference will track the recent business and regulatory developments and explore the potential of ICC arbitration for further enhancing economic growth and safeguarding investments in Iran.
